FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE

DIGI-NET ANNOUNCES PROFESSIONAL SERVICES DIVISION

ATLANTA, September 2, 2003 – Digi-Net Technologies, Inc. is pleased to announce the establishment of its Professional Services Division. The division was designed to offer clients a unique blend of custom development and consultative services ensuring that clients are able to execute a successful implementation strategy for both Digi-Net's community building and e-commerce technologies. This new offering provides access to professional software developers, expert community building and e-commerce consultants, and implementation specialists. The Professional Services Team is able to assist in strategic consultation matters and the development of custom features and technologies. Additionally, the Professional Services Team can assist in the integration of Digi-Net's technologies with a client's existing applications, tools or processes.

The Professional Services Division is staffed with readily available software engineers and product advocates. These experts allow clients to leverage Digi-Net's vast knowledge of the community and e-commerce software technology and markets. Past projects include the integration of custom buddy lists (with external membership databases), custom emoticon support, custom bots, enhancements to moderated chat facilities and many more. Digi-Net's community experts can also help you plan, manage, execute and run your online community, including live auditorium style chat events (webcasts) complete with live moderators to ensure that the events go off flawlessly.

“We are very pleased to announce the formation of the Professional Services Group. While professional services have been available for select clients previously, the increase in demand for these types of services was the catalyst behind the formal introduction and formation of the group,” says Robert Parker, President and CEO of Digi-Net. “Our clients typically use our technologies as the base of their online community building and e-commerce efforts. Proper implementation and integration within their environments is business-critical to them. Professional Services ensure the probability of a successful implementation.”
